Family History and General Information

Ple's parents split up and Ple continues to live with her mother. Ple has 3 siblings. With so many children in her care, Ple's mother is unable to support them adequately especially with their education expenses. Ple is commended by her teacher for being attentive in her study. She is joyful and happy especially when she is among her friends with whom she likes to play volleyball when they have some free time. To help Ple to be able to continue on with her academic study, a monthly allowance is paid for her school's tuition fee, school uniform, textbooks, educational tools, and other necessity as needed. Close follow up is being maintained to ensure her well being and her educational progress. Ple is now in her 6th year under the primary educational level which is her last and final year, before continuing on to the 1st year under the lower secondary educational level (Years 7 through 9). June 2009

Ple is now in her 1st year under the lower secondary educational level after having successfully passed the school's year-end final examination which was taken in March, with an overall average grade of 3.26 (out of a possible 4.00). She is being commended for being able to do well academically in spite of the hard work and great responsibility being undertaken by her. Ple is also doing well in sports. She was able to acquire the gold medal award in playing rattan ball in the annual Chonburi Provincial open tournament, a difficult task even for an older male player. Her mother sends her to help her grandmother in the small convenience shop and she is required to do practically every thing including making deliveries to customers, a tough job for a young lady in her age range. Usual close following up is being maintained to ensure her well behaviour and conduct as well as her successful achievement in sports and in her academic study. (NS)

Ple continues to do fairly well in her academic study in her 1st year under the lower secondary educational level with the possibility to advance to the next higher level 2nd year when the next school year starts in May. Ple remains at the same school, Wat Suthawas, at which many of our residents are also studying there. She continues to do well in her study. In meeting with her teacher at the school, who paid compliments to her continued good behavior and conduct, she expressed joy and happiness over Ple's good performance in her academic study. Ple enjoys good health. (NS)

Ple continues with her academic study in Year 8. The school's year-end final examination is just around the corner at the end of February or early March. Ple is quite confident that she will be able to succeed in passing her final examination and that she shall advance to Year 9. This will be her last and final year in the lower secondary education. In addition to attending to her daily academic classes at school daily, Ple, being a Muslim, has additional regular duties in helping the head of the Mosque in his daily work. She has done well. There has been no negative feedback from her teacher at school regarding her attentiveness to her academic study or her general behavior and conduct. Ple is strong and healthy. She also helps in doing some house chores after her daily schooling. (NS)

July 2011

In the school's year-end final examination in March, Ple passed with a well above average grade and she now advances to Year 9, her last and final year in lower secondary education. Towards the end of this school year, probably in January or February at the latest, she shall be encouraged to make a decision to state if she wants to continue on with her academic study in the upper secondary education level (Years 10-11) or to shift her aim and enroll in a vocational training course, whatever would suit her the best. Just like her sister, Cherry, who has set a good example, Ple returns home from school and helps out with the daily household chores, one of which is to care for her two younger sisters who also attend schooling in the primary education program. Ple is enjoying good health. There has never been any negative feedback from her teacher at school in regards to her academic study or her general behavior and conduct. (NS)
